Not illustrated. 1871 Excerpt: . shall say to him, Thou shalt not live, for thou speakest lies in the name of the Lord. Two-thirds of the evildoers will perish, and the surviving third will be refined as gold is refined, and will be true servants of the Lord-- They will call upon Him, and He will hear them; the Lord speaks, It is My people, and they speak, Jehovah is our Lord: they will be the holy seed destined to perpetuate God s glory and truth in all eternity. Then the prophet resumes his chief theme once more, and he dwells upon it in glowing language. He speaks in metaphors and similes which indeed seem at first sight obscure, but become clear if read in the light of his previous addresses. He announces in no lenient terms, misfortunes which the Jews will have to suffer--the enmity of all nations, the ruin of their cities, the plunder of their property; but though many will be carried off into captivity, the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city, but will behold God s mercy, and rejoice in their safety. Then, desirous to describe God s omnipotence, the prophet shows that the laws of nature which men regard as immutable, are subject to His command; and evidently taking his images from an earthquake, he says, And His feet shall stand on that day upon the Mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem in the east, and the Mount...
