Excerpt: . . . 11 fied as potentially not being registered, yet the requirement was imposed on every-one at great expense and is still in the law today. This is not to say that I do not believe in a students civic obligation to register with Selective Service, but the solu-tion imposed to resolve a very small problem added unnecessary complexity to al-ready complicated delivery system. Another example to illustrate how excessive burdens are imposed on the financial aid office involves the recently enacted ACG SMART grant programs. The Education Departments interpretation of the law for these programs has caused major prob-blems for the financial community. On April 18, the negotiated rulemaking com-mittee could not reach consensus due to the unworkability of the academic year progression aspect of Departments interpretation. Further, the inclusion of the merit component in the law has essentially invited the Department to step...
