The psychical processes Involved in sense-perception show that the forming of an individual concept requires the presence of the object, and since general concepts are derived from individual concepts, it follows that no concept, Individual or general, can be taught without presenting the appropriate object or objects to the mind. The same is true in teaching ideas, particular or general. A conceptor ideals theproductol the minds action, and the act of perceiving an individual object requires the presence of the object. ft follows from the above principle that no primary concept or idea can be taught through its word. A word can recall and represent a known concept or idea associated with it, but a word can notsummons a new idea into what has been called the presence chamber of the soul. The futile attempt to teach primary concepts and ideas through words is responsible for more unsatisfactory results than any other error of elementary instruction. Carlisle characterizes his teachers as hide-bound pedants who crammed him with innumerable dead vocables and called it fostering the growth of the mind. Carlisles pedants once represented a very large class of so-called teachers and it is feared that this race of word-cramming pedants is not yet extinct. The so-called maxim, Ideas before words, may not be a necessary principle even of primary instruction, but it is excellent advice. The essential thing is to teach both the idea aud its sign, and especially to connect them indissolubly together, and...
