Excerpt: . . . 5 Before I begin, Mr. Chairman, again, let me thank your staff, and also the members of our Capitol Police force for helping us get the tables out of here so we could accommodate more people. Ap- plause . As you can see, they did a great job. Thank you. As you can see when you came in, Mr. Chairman, we have an overflow group, and some of them are now going down to Room 106, I guess, which is the overflow room. I think it is going to take some time for them to get there, so they will probably miss a little bit of this. But I think you can gather from that that this is an issue of ut-most importance, of the highest importance, to people with disabilities in our country. The question before this committee today is, really, how do we give older Americans and Americans with disabilities greater choices by expanding access to home- and community-based services. Fourteen years ago, when this Congress passed and President Bush signed into law the Americans With Disabilities Act, we had four goals regarding people with disabilities. First, was to give equal opportunity in our society to people with disabilities. Second, to make sure that people with disabilities were full participants in all aspects of our society: education, transportation, jobs, everything. The third goal, was to provide independent living for people with disabilities. Fourth, was to provide economic self-sufficiency for people with disabilities in our country. Those were basically the goals of the Americans With Disabilities Act. So where we find...
